713

Motor Launches
Naval Mail Office
H.M.S. "ARROGANT."
DOVER.

TELEPHONE:- DOVER 329.
Extension 16.

England
Jan 8 1915

Sir Robert Falconer.
University of Toronto
Toronto

Dear President Falconer:-

I received your card of Christmas greetings a few days ago and was glad to find that you still think of me occasionally, at the University. It seems a very long time since I left Toronto, tho' my stay over here has not been as long as that of many others.

Our work in the Motor Launch branch of the Dover patrol can scarcely be termed exciting, tho' necessary. We perform very much the same functions as a city policeman — just watch-

January 1915

TELEPHONE:-DOVER 329.
Extension 16.

H.M.S. "ARROGANT."
DOVER.

ing for intruders. We are never more than a few miles from the German bases on the Belgian coast, so that if there is any naval fighting going, we usually see it all. I find life in the navy, as a rule, very monotonous.

One meets Canadians everywhere, in every branch of both services: without undue boasting, it seems to me that they make their presence felt in a way quite out of proportion to their numbers. I don't think the people at home quite realize the splendid quality of their lads overseas, particularly (say) those in the air-services and infantry.

Once again thanking you for the good wishes of old Varsity, I remain

Sincerely yours

A.R.M. Lower